

Jharokha

KIMORA®

An apple in hand, slow bites between stolen glances.

One sits on the ledge, the other rests against the wall, talking about nothing and everything.

Sunlight falls across their faces, shadows dancing on the floor, as time moves gently outside.

Nani घर^{Ka}

The world looks different through a jharokha.

Framed by carved wood and warm sunlight, the outside feels like a moving story. They leaned against the window, lost in thought, watching the courtyard come alive.
